City Council,

I apologize for the technical problems during my comment section. I have provided a text of my comments for your review. Thank you for all you are doing for Camas! Stay safe and healthy!

Best regards,

Susan Oatney

Hi, my name is Susan Oatney, and my family and I have lived in Camas since 2008. I have been working for 35 years in the industrial WW treatment industry, solving waste treatment issues for my customers. Many of my customers have direct discharge permits, meaning they do not discharge to a city system, they discharge to a body of water, like a lake, stream, river, ocean, etc. Their permits are exceedingly strict and as part of the “Waters of the US ACT”, they, along with the guidance of Federal EPA, are continually trying to improve and better their own discharge to what is now called “Navigatable Waters”.

The number of nights I have spent on customer sites fighting to keep them in compliance are incalculable. The number of sleepless nights my customers have endured are again incalculable. Not violating their discharge permits is not only important—it is the most important thing they do. Production will shut down, personnel will go without sleep, 100,000's of thousands will be spent on consultants and outside support to keep industry in compliance. Why—the stakes are very high. Not only for the environment, but for plant management itself. Continued violation of the Clean Waters Act, which as of June 22 was amended to be the “Navigatable Waters Protection Act” can result in a felony and jail time for management. Based on the information shared by Marie Callerame, we have not only exceeded permit guidance for the Lacamas Shores biofilter, but we have violated the maximum threshold for Phosphate and TSS in December and the City Council was notified verbally in June. This is an incredibly serious situation. As mentioned above, industrial customers knowingly violating this act can and do go to jail!

Those permit guidelines were set for a reason—the Total Suspended Solids, Phosphate, and Conductivity levels are set by determining the safe amount that particular stream can contribute to the lake without harming biology. Health advisers currently warn about using our lake. —we can't let our dogs swim and play in it, we are advised not to swim in it, fish from it must be cleaned a certain way. I myself, along with others, have gotten sick after accidentally ingesting water from the lake. It is the crown jewel of our community; yet day in and day out, the Lacamas Shores biofilter and other contributors are allowed to continue polluting it. I know that many within Lacamas shores have been pleading for nearly a decade to get the biofilter fixed. However there is a very loud, yet minority, contingent in the HOA and the city that continually refers to the biofilter as a Wetland. It is not—it cannot be both and is excluded from the navigatable waters protection act. That undeniable factual exculsion is as a storm water control feature. The biofilter is an award winning engineered storm water system that disparately needs maintenance.

I know these are crazy times, but we can do something about this!
