Discussion of the IDI Training ensued. The training is free of cost due to a grant, but may be more costly for a group. There is a new Human Resource Director at the City to whom something like the IDI Training would need to be presented to, to see if it's a good fit for the City.

Commission Chair Friesen will get in touch with the IDI Training contact and cc Commissioner Connelly to get information to the City's Human Resources Director.

Commissioner Joselyn questioned whether the City has an onboard training for new city employees, such as Diversity/Equity Training? Commissioner Connelly answered that, that was another question for the new Human Resources Director.

UPDATES:

7. Indigenous People's Day Review

Indigenous People's Day Review. Discussion on the Event, that it was a good turn out approximately 100 people and was a nice sample of food. It was difficult to hear the dedication/blessing ceremony at the sculpture from the Arts & Culture Commission Chair Kari Hedlund and then City Councilor Tasha Connelly.

It was also mentioned that the Event needs to be more organized and have more communication with the Ojibwe Education Programmer. In the future, the Human Rights Commission may want to establish and pay a primary coordinator to organize the entire event.

8. Work Group Update

Work Group Update: Commissioner Krumpotich led the discussion for his work group saying that there is a Universal Declaration of Human Rights for 2023. It will be a year of celebration kicking off.
